LONDON, Aug. 11 (NYT).—Geoffrey Rippon, Britain's chief negotiator with the European Recusonic Community, is being sent to Uganita in an urgent effort to ward off the threatened expulsion of about 55,000 Asian's with British passports. The announcement, made today in the House of Lords, underlined Britain's anxiety about the threat made last week by President Idi Amin of Uganda that there was "no room" in his country for the Asians mostly shopkeepers because they were "economic saboteurs." He gave Britain three months to see to the removal of the Asians.

British officials fear that any expulsion of the Asians, and their subsequent plight—could spark new debate and controversy over Britain's immigration policies.

Restricted Immigration . Many of the Asians, who are of Indian or Pakistani origin, secured their British passports-in Seat Africa, formerly under Brit-ish control. Under Britain's restricted immigration policy, a quota of 3,500 a year has been allotted to the Asians, who need an entry voucher as well as a passport to disembark in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Rippon is expected to leave for Uganda tonight. He is also scheduled to visit Tanzania and

U.K. Food Is Airlifted To Islands

No Progress Made In Dockers' Strike

LONDON, Aug. 11 (UPI).— Military transports today launched an emergency airlift of des-perately needed food to 34,000 inhabitants of Britain's northernmost offshore islands, which were threatened with starvation by the 15-day-old dock strike.

The airlift began at 6 p.m. as a Hercules transport of the Royal Air Force roared off from Kinloss Air Base, in northern Scotland, with 20 tons of sugar, flour, cereals, meat and other urgently needed food for the Orkney Islands, north of Scot-

An hour later, a second Her-cules took off equally heavily loaded with supplies for the bleak Shetland Islands.

Earlier, longshoremen at Aberdeen reversed a decision not to load ships for the islands and for oil rigs in the North Sea, many of them manned by American prospecting crews. They voted to resume loading emergency supplies after all.

Britain's 42,000 longshoremen walked off the job July 28 to back demands for greater job security and the right to work container depots, including those on inland sites.

Their walkout has shut down all of Britain's major seaports. In the House of Lords, the government said it does not plan in the next few days to use the emergency powers it took Aug. 2. These include use of troops to mova vital supplies.

Lord Jellicoe, chief government spokesman in the upper house, said "The need to use emergency powers to help the animal feedstuffs situation will not arise in the next few days. But the gov-ernment will not hesitate to use these emergency powers if it becomes essential to do so to continue the flow of supplies. We regard this as a last resort mea-

SAIGON, Aug. 11 (AP).—The war ended today for U.S. com-bat infantrymen on the same beaches where it began more than seven years ago and spawned a troubled army and a disenchanted America

The U.S. command announced that the lone remaining infan-try unit, the 3d Battalion, 21st Infantry, is going home from Densing. The first American infantry units to enter the Vietnam war, 3,500 Marines, landed at the northern port on March 8, 1965, to provide security for the Danang Air Base.

Brandt Denies Responsibility For Police Raid on Magazine

Chancellor Willy Brandt said today that his government was in no way responsible for raids on offices of the illustrated weekly Quick that have unleashed a political uproar in West Germauy.

"I wish to state with great emphasis that the government had nothing to do, either directly or indirectly, with the action taken against Quick by the public prosecutor," the 58-year-old chancellor told reporters.

Public prosecutors in Bonn, Munich and Hamburg led legal and tax officials in searches of editorial and publishing offices of the 1.8-million circulation weekly on Wednesday and yes-

Bonn prosecutor Dieter Irsfeld said that it was his duty to act against Quick because tax investigators turned up evidence that the magazine's Bonn office had ohtained confidential official documents by means of hribery.

In particular, he said, the investigators were seeking evidence on how the magazine managed to get hold of a photocopy of the letter Economics and Finance Minister Karl Schiller sent to Chancellor Brandt in July, In the letter, Mr. Schiller an-

Olaf Liungren, Swedish presldent of the International Magasine Publishers Organization, and the organization's general secre-tary, Lord Mountevans of Britain, sent a telegram to Mr. Brandt asking him to intervene in the interests of press freedom, a spokesman said.

At his meeting with newsmen today, Mr. Srandt told reporters

But he said that the state and its organs had not only the right, but the duty, to act against breaches of official confidence and helbery.

The chancellor said that he. personally, had never shown the slightest interest in taking action against Quick's publication of Mr. Schiller's letter.

"The publication of the letter was not of great importance," Mr. Brandt sald,

At Quick's main editorial offices in Munich, chief editor Johannes Leeb said that the staff was working night and day to make up for time lost by the raids and to get out next Thursday's edition.

He said that the magazine, which is often hostile to the Brandt government, prohably would make its account of the raids its cover story.

B-52 Raids a Sign

A sign of the rising concern about the Communist activity is the number of B-52 bombing missions targeted to a particular area. The bulk of the raids are still on the northern front, but of the 24 missions flown in the 24 hours ending at noon, six wera against suspected troop concentrations in the delta.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vletnam has predicted— and many U.S. officials seem to agree-that the Communists. whose offensive has slowed from the pace of its early weeks, will open another major push before the U.S. presidential elections. Mr. Thieu has also predicted that by mid-September his troops will have recaptured all lost territory, hut this now appears unlikely without some drastic change in the present course of battle-field activity.

Fischer Wins Longest Game, Leads 8-5 for Championship

(Continued from Page I) "He's really trying," one said, "But how dangerous!" said enother. The sacrifice allowed Fischer to bring his king to the scene of battle. At the 71st move the American grand master finally got his rook into play once more. That marked the end. Spassky made one more move and then reached over and stopped the clock. The ending was one of Fischer's most brilliant performances, and there were a few theers from an audience of about

Spassky Suffers

Toward the end, when the game suddenly slipped from his control, Spassky seemed to be suffering His normally impassive face had a sick look, and his movements were slow. When he got up to stretch his legs, his body did not have its previous elasticity. Fischer, who also looked somewhat drawn, began to exude confidence near the end. He lolled back and sipped ice water or a cola drink, and those familiar with his mannerisms knew that he had the game under complete control at that point.

Directly after the game Fischer rushed out. Spassky, who looked etunned, stared unbelievingly at the board and then sat down to play over the last few moves with the referee, Lothar Schmid. Obviously he was trying several variations to see what went wrong. Then, looking dejected: he slowly left tha stage to a round of sympathetic applause.

Grand masters in the sudience had, mixed reactions to Spassky's defeat. Some thought that the position had been lost after yes-terday's adjournment, and that only Spassky's stout resistance had prolonged it so long. Others maintained that Spassky should have drawn, and that he either missed a valuable tempo toward the end or blundered outright on his 69th move. Mistake Seen . .

Flust claused times; Spatcky 220.

Krogius, the Soviet grand master who is Spassky's psychologist, was reported saying that the champion's 69th move was a mistake. Instead of playing rook to queen 1, Spassky should have played rook to bishop 3. That Erogius thought would have been enough to draw.

"I do not know if Spassky Lubomir Kavalek. "This game will take months and months of analysis hefore anybody can say anything about it."

The game today was chamber music of chess, as opyesterday's fireworks. With slender forces remaining on both sides. the pattern of moves was highly refined, purer, more dependent on logic rather than brute atrength. Those whn were able to follow the weaving counterpoint and delicate relationships, as Fischer and Spassky spun out their de-signs, found it the most rewarding and, in its razor-edged way, the most exciting game of the match_

It was a game of high drama, color and, at the end, iridescence, with one powerful mind stubbornly trying to dominate another powerful mind. Finally ona mind gave way. Fischer has said in the past that the supreme moment in any chess game for him comes when he feels that he has crushed his opponent's ego. Spassky today was indeed crushed after ontting up so gallant a resistance for so long a time, and it may he that he will not be able the Indochina war.

The bill anthorizes appropriations that will be made in another hill, including $750 million in military grants, $529 million in military credit sales, $769 million in supporting economic assistance and $100 million for refuzee relief in Bangladesh."

Israel would receive $350 million, most of it for credit purchases of planes and other weapons, with-two-thirds of the military grants going to South Korea, Cambodia, Thailand and Turkey.

The pullout amendment, strongopposed by President Nixon would have directed withdrawal of all U.S. forces by Oct. 1, subject to the release of U.S. pri-soners, an accounting for the missing and a cease-fire to the extent necessary for safe with-drawal.

Md., Aug. 11 positions on abortion could not Shriver, formally be reconciled: Formally, Sen. McGovern has said that abortion is not an issue that the federal government—or a presidential candidate should be concerned with However, statements made earlier in the cam-paign indicate that Sen. Mc-Govern is for a liberalization of Mr. Striver reiterated Sen. Mc-Govern's position, saying he agreed "exactly" with the view that the federal government should leave the abortion issue to Disagreement Expected . .

"In addition to what he has said about public officials, I am told, though I haven't seen the actual texts, that sometimes Sen. McGovern has indicated that he felt that certain regulations perhaps involving abortion might be considered by people and studied at the state level," Mr. Shriver

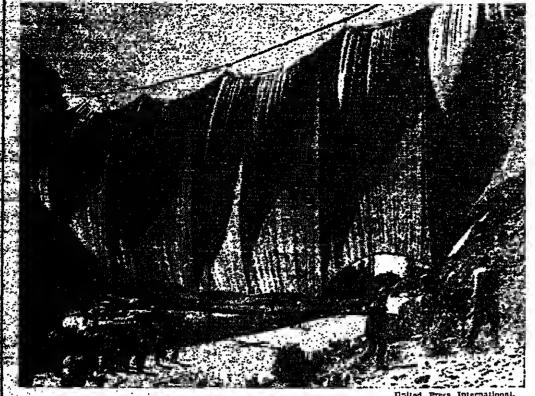

"Myself, I am not in favor of what is called abortion on demand and Sen. McGovern has said to me on a number of ocra-sions already that he would never expect me ... to agree with Sen McGovern on every position that he takes."

As for abortion, Mr. Shriver said, "This may be one of the issues where Sen. McGovern and I may agree to disagree. If so, that's all right. It's all right with him and it's all right with me." Mr. Shriver, a standic, is known to oppose abortion except when the life or health of the mother is at stake. His wife, the former Eunice Kennedy, wrote an article in McCall's magazine in 1968, opposing abortion. Mr. Shriver, however, has always added that he would not impose his personal beliefs on the legislative process.

Rogers Calls It Politics. WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP). Secretary of State William P. Rogers today denounced as "political fantasy" Mr. Shriver's assertion that President Nixon "blew" a chance to end the war. Mr. Rogers said at a news con-ference that he had been checking statements made by Mr. Shriver in writing and to associates when Mr. Shriver resigned as ambassador to Paris. "He never suggested anything like this either in writing or orally, Mr. Rogers said. "It's not really a fabrication,

AF Sergeant Gets 3 Years For Spying

Fla., Aug. 11 (AP).-A military indge today convicted Air Force M. Sgt. Walter T. Perkins of attempting to smuggle secret U.S. defense documents to Soviet agents, then went into sechusion to consider the sentence.

Perkins was sentenced to three years in federal prison, a dis-honorable discharge from the service and a reduction in benefits. Maximum sentence was 26 years imprisonment.

Col. Joe Peck said Perkins's actions were the work of a "willful, gyil mind," but he refused a prosecution demand to hand down a maximum sentence of

Col. Peck heard the espi-onage court-martial after Perkins waived his right to a jury trial

The judge dismissed a defense contention that Perkins's ability to distinguish right from wrong was affected by acute alcoholism. Perkins, the 37-year-old ranking noncommissioned officer in the intelligence unit of this northwest Florida base, is accused in three separate counts stemming from an attempt to smuggle vital defense secrets to Soviet agents in Mexico City. Ticket, Map. Documents

Air Force witnesses testified during the week-long court-martial that Perkins had a ticket to Mexico City, a handdrawn map of the Mexico City area and five secret documents in his possession when arrested last Oct. 18 at the Panama City, Fia.,

The government contended that Perkins planned to deliver the documents to a Soviet intelligence officer assigned to the Russian Embassy in the Mexican

The defense term, headed by civilian attorney Henry Roth-blatt, claimed that acute alcoholism drove Perkins to commit the act along with a vague belief that he could somehow engineer the release of three American prisoners of war from North

Perkins whose job at Tyndall's Air Defense Weapons Center included processing and filing clas-sified documents, was supposed to have destroyed the five documents last Sept. 10, government witnesses testified.

The documents, the Air Force contended, involved Pentagon secrets on Air Force radar equipment and intelligence reports on Soviet and East European missile

Voters Applaud McGovern But Party Chiefs Shun Him

NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (AP) .-Sen, George McGovern, winding up his first major campaign tour, had better luck talking to voters than to politicians today.

In Providence, R.I., the Democratic presidential nominee drew applause and cheers from people at a lunchtime rally and at a home for the elderly, as he had done yesterday in appearances before voters at Manchester, N.H., and Hartford, Conn.

But he failed to patch up a dispute with Rhode Island Democratic chairman Lawrence P. McGarry, In New York, Brook-lyn leader Meade Esposito and Bronx leader Patrick J. Cunningham stayed away from a news conference called to demonstrate party unity.

Sen, McGovern and his wife, Eleanor, dropped their plan to instead, they headed for Wood-stock, N.Y., to spend tomorrow and part of Sunday at the home of a friend.

The candidate's aides, meanwhile, released a schedule of his next campaign swing, a three-day trip next week to Ohio, Illinois and Wisconsin.

At a news conference at the state capitol, Sen. McGovern the "wounds and scars" of the party. He apologized publicly to state party chief McGarry for a "misunderstanding" about a deal Mr. McGarry says Sen. McCovern made to seat party regulars among the state delegates to the Democratic National Convention last month. But Mr. McGarry wouldn't buy it, and said he'd stick to his original plan to support state and local Democrats and ignore Sen, McGovern.

Sen. McGovern did receive warm words from Gov. Frank Licht and Sen Claiborne Pell. Sen John O. Pastore, who heads Sen. McGovern's Rhode Island campaign, was busy elsewhere. Here in New York, Sen. Mc-Govern held a news conference and named former Mayor Robert F. Wagner as head of his New York campaign. Mr. Wagner pledged to close the gap between party regulars and the reformers working for Sen. McGovern.

Bail Backer of Angela Davis, Driven Off Farm, Seeks a Job

CARUTHERS, Calif., Aug. 11. -The farmer who put up his land as bail for Angela Davis says he has fallen on such hard times that he is leaving his farm here in search of work. Roger McAfee, 33, has placed classified advertisements in two California newspapers, seeking work as a milker or herdsman.

He said repercussions from his support for Miss Davis had put him into an "economic tsilspin," drawing bill collectors and blocking the credit he needs to operate his 405-acre farm.

Mr. McAfee, who describes himself as a "humanitarian Communist," put up his farm in lieu of $100,000 bail to free Miss Davis. She was acquitted of charges of murder, kidnapping and conspir-acy in the Marin County courthouse shooting of August, 1970, after spending more than a year in prison before bail was granted. Mr. McAfee says that life has not been the same for him since he provided the collateral for Miss Davis. He said that he had

Haiti and the Latin Arms Race

American military aid ostensibly to defend Haiti from Communism and theu used the aid to build up his private force of thuga and to repress all real and imagined expressions of discontent with his misrule. President Kennedy cut him off in 1962 but Duvalier coasted on until his death in 1970. With this background, it is not only natural but necessary to look with a jaundiced eye on the new application for military aid by the Haitian government of Jean-Claude (Baby Doc) Duvalier-the more so because the discredited Luckner Cambronne, holdover head of both police and army, remains as powerful as he does in Port-au-Prince.

Last year, Haiti bocght six American patrol boats and some helicopters for coastal patrolling. In January, citing an imaginative variety of potential threats to their security, the Baltians asked for preposterous amounts of military ald, including jets; the request was later scaled down to $5 to $10 million worth of more modest equipment. The United States reportedly intends to sell some lesser amount: enough to demonstrate support for a government that's shown more stability and responsibility than most people had expected, but not so large a sale as to hieed Halti's anemic treasury or to overfatten the local military or to stir up a big fuss back in the United States. It's a diplomatic tightrope act.

Halti, however, is one of the last countries in Letin America where the United States can still attempt to wield some discreet influence over local military expenditures. For one of the notable and largely unremarked hemispheric developments in recent years, part of the larger effort hy Latins to set themselves apart from Washington and to respond to their own felt national imperatives, is to spend heavily on new and modern arms. This trend got seriously under way in the 1960s, while the United Statea was still ltching to affect social reform in Latin America. Reacting to what it took to be an improper diversion of resources, Congress limited American arms sales to the region to a total of $75 million, thought then to he a tight but not unrealistic celling. The celling was later raised to $150 million.

Well, last year Latin Americans bought more than $1 billion worth of modern weapons from West European suppliers. The French and British in particular, with complete disregard for the social consequences.

François (Papa Doc) Duvalier wheedled have taken advantage of the United States's decent concern for the hemisphere to rush in and peddle their own hottest jets and destroyers and tanks. The Latins have bought the stuff to exhibit for status or to keep their generals in the harracks. Venezuela bought 142 30-ton French tanks for $80 million just the other day. The United States still worries, however ineffectively. about the social and economic condition of Latin America. Taking a simpler and more cynical view, the Europeans look upon Latin America as a pool of customers for their over-built arms industries.

That so many (not all) Latin states choose to buy these fancy weapons is, of course, their affair. But their choice is not without its implications for their development and, more specifically, for American participation in lt. It is surprising that Latin governments don't tie tight atrings to their European arms purchases and demand that the Europeans ioan back to them for development the dollars that the Latins spend in Europe for arms. It is strange, too, that so few Latins have yet realized that, as word of their prodigality spreads, many Americans will be inclined to ask why they should provide soft loans to help the people of a region that in one year can commit more than a hillion dollars in hard cash for military supplies. That resources are being diverted from social needs will disturb some Americans. Othera will be irked that the dollars are being spent on military orders for which American arms manufacturers are prevented from competing hy the self-limiting policy of their own govern-

In a cogent analysis, "Latin America, Toward a New Nationalism," Ben S. Stephansky, former American amhassador to Bolivia, concludes that the new agenda of interests in the hemisphere "absolves the United States from the role of mentor of Latin America's development—and this we should welcome. But the new agenda also brings into sharp focus the obligation Latin America must assume under the pressure of its new popular nationalism: that as the independent agents of their own development, the Latin American countries bring a larger measure of social justice to their own people." The British government has acted with the racial strife that has plagued Britain

Neverthelesa, London's duty was clear since the Asians affected by General Amin's impetuous order had settled in Uganda under British colonial rule and had been permitted to retain their British citizenship when Uganda gained Its independence.

Rhodesia at the Olympics

In essence, the conditions [for admitting Rhodesia to the Olympics] uphold the illusion that Rhodesia is the territory it was before its unilateral declaration of independence... If any Rhodesian wins a medal-regarded by the sporting pundits as a remote possibility-it is God Save the Queen which will be played and the old Union Jack of colonial days which will be run up the flagpoie. Likewise Rhodesian athletes will travel on Olympic passports which declare them to be British subjects... Many people will feel it is rather an unaavoury farce. The device of the Rhodesian regime toeing the legal line to get its sportsmen to Munich merely shows how hypocritical the regime can be. -From the Times (London).

The agreement between Iran and the international companies thoroughly modifies the oil market ... Tehran to double production and get the higgest refinery in the world. This success of the consortium is crowning its other recent performances, some of which are considerable: The assurance of an increased production by Saudi Arabia, the rapid resumption of oil extraction in Nigeria. the many discoveries in the North Sea. The receding menace of a world shortage of energy considerably weakens the position of the under-developed oil-producing countries ... A front can last only as long as the interest of each of its members coincides with that of the others. This was the case in 1970 and 1971: the victories then won over the big companies in Tehran and Tripoli were substantial. A new phase is now opening in which everyone is likely to fight for himself and the most powerful, in all likelihood, will profit most from this situa-

Egypt's Breach With Russia

Russia, it seems clear, will continue to have a fairly massive stake in Egypt. Her economic investment alone has been on an enormous scale. Russia is also unlikely to give up lightly her strategic ambitions in the area as a whole. When allowance has been made for these factors, however, it remains true that a real change has resulted from Sadat's decision. Britain, and her future partners in Europe, should be actively considering what role to play. America is likely to lie fairly low until at least after the presidential election. Britain is already participating in the consortium building the Red Sea-Mediterranean pipeline. There may be much more we could be doing, or at least preparing for.

LONDON.—The increase of diphtheria in London is occasioning much attention and some alarm. The latest report of the Metropolitan Asylums Board gives the number of diphtheris cases as 963 and on being interviewed yesterday, Mr. T.D. Dr. Foord Caiger, medical superintendent, told the reporter that in his opinion there is a subtle connection between diphtheria and compulsory education. Q-Comrade Kapek! On the temporary stationing of Soviet troops; won't usey be accommodated in our new blocks of flats? (Laughs)

A-I'll tell you what. Let's do this, We'll fix it so you can go and see bow they are stationed, how they live and what they do. And they are officers who maybe even went through the war. I think your accommodation is much better. These comrades are very modest, and you must bear in mind that the conditions under which they are living are not pleasant-separated from r.er.A families (laughs) and all that. You might reply that in that case they'd be better off if they went home (hoots of laughter in the hall). You who-it's all very well to laugh—that's really what a lot of people think; but we're not worrying. That won't be decided by us here—when and how will be decided by a much higher and more competent au-thority. And I'd have you know that the Soviet troops on Czechoalovak soil will not restrict our sovereignty under any circumstances and, on the contrary, are a guarantee that Czechoslovakia will develop as a sovereign and independent state! Of course if anyone still . . . (murmuring in the hall) you can take your time, insofar as your lecturers haven't cleared these points up. or if you don't change your mind about these problems, you'll have to realize that we are living in a class-divided world, in which two camps exist, a socialist one and a capitalist one, and the troops that are on Czechoslovak territory are the troops of a socialist state and they are here after the conclusion of an agreement by the highest state and party

Vietnam Cited

Q-Comrade Kapek! You said that it was heroism on the part of the Soviet Union to liberate us and that the Soviet troops were saked to come. What is your opinion of the South Vietnamese government's request to the United States to send American troops into Vietnam? (mur-muring in the hall).

A-I think that this question will have to be answered by teachers of Marxism-Leninism and your lecturers. This is too serious a matter if you can't see the difference not that I'm angry with you-because I regard this as possible but not very natural at our schools and our level Perhaps you don't realize that a war is going on in Vietnam and the American imperialists are hanging on to this war and Vistnamese people are actually being murdered and that North Vietnam is waging a war of na-tional liberation: If that's the case, then it would take an awful lot . . . because a question like this can't he dealt with in one answer so that you would see that there is a big difference between the Soviet Union sending troops to Czechoslovakia, that that was international aid, and that an imperialist war is being fought in Vietnam, and if you haven't got that straight, it won't exactly have the most favorable repercussions for you and your future. Q. One of the comrades asks and has a feeling that the museum shouldn't have been fired at. In Prague.

Fire Into Air

A-I can give a straight answer to that. Look here, when the Soviet troops came they couldn't imagine what sort of situation would develop and the comrades had orders that if dangerous situations arose, so as to deter people from further actions, they were to fire into the air, and those of you who know Wenceslas Square, well the museum is a bit tall (hoots of laughter followed by applause). Listen, listen! You haven't finished grasping things yet, or else you know them ahead of your time. I don't know (laughter, murmuring). When

Or if you think they should have shot at the (shouts). . . Perhaps it's a good thing you see these questions in this light now, because then it was a bit more complicated. Q-What are Dubcek and Smrkovsky doing and what is Comrade Pachman [the chess grandmaster] doing? A-You see how interesting it is (murmuring in the hall).

Comrade Dubcek is in Bratislava. working in the regional forestry administration (laughter, a roice: 'At his own request!'). He as a green uniform and is in charge of mechanisation. When it was discussed with him, not one job but many jobs—you'd be glad to sorted his ideas out, so he'd go and do that for a bit and perhaps later he'd be put in for something else.

Special Pension

Josef Smrkovsky retired; he has a special pension for his services-in my view in inverted commas-forgive me if I don't say how much, so as not to give an inaccurate figure. So he's retired. From time to time be takes a tram ride or drops in at a pub. So far it seems it's not opportune for him to speak ont. So that's bow he lives.

Now Pachman. That question was either put for me to satisfy curiosity or else so that I could evoke even greater interest in it; He was in custody, he has been released and be is living at home in private—if that suffices as an

Q-Why have the names of those comrades who appealed to the Soviet Union for international assistance never been published?

A-I know that many of you don't believe that groups and thousands of individuals appealed to the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries for help. What would happen in the world, in our society and in the party, if the concrete names were published? I have no illusions on that score and I tell you quite frankly: what happened in Czechoslovakia in August, 1968, is. no page of glory. It is no cause for celebration. But I must add, what—and this is my personal conviction—the Soviet Union riskand more risky than in 19451 - be presenting himself, not as a ing the underdog role to the hilt. radical, but as the quiet leader of another of those historic movements of the American people toward social and economic change. Much will obviously depend on whether be has made a correct judgment of the national mood. "Just as the cycle of American history running from the Civil War to the 1890s can be thought of chiefly as a period of industrial and continental expansion," the late Richard Hofstadter wrote in the Age of Reform, "so the age running from about 1890 to the Second World War can be considered an age of reform.

"The surge of reform," Hof-stadter continued, "though large-ly turned back in the 1890s and temporarily reversed in the 1930s, has set the tone of American politics for the greater part of the 20th century. These reform movements . . . fall readily into three main episodes: the egrarian uprising that found its most intense expression in the Populism of the 1890s and the Bryan campaign of 1896; the Progressive movement, which extended from about 1900 to 1914, and the New Deal, whose dynamic phase was concentrated in a few years of the 1930s."

In Forefront

What McGovern seems to be suggesting is that he is in the forefront of another of these great movements, this one originating not mainly among the farmers but among the restless people of the urban and suburban areas, and that he is thus not a radical outsider but merely the symbol of the recurring American impulse for change and in-

With the nightmare of the vice-presidential struggle behind him, and this theme of change and continuity clearly in mind be is obviously more at home walking through the shoe factories of Manchester or the life insurance offices of Hartford than he is in the more formal and venomous atmosphere of Washington.

On a stage before the television cameras, McGovern seems flat and ill at ease and talks with all the monotonous rhythm of a metronome, but out among the people he is in his natural element. When he landed at Manchester on the first stop of his first swing, he was presented by an editorial in the Manchester Union Leader, denouncing him as a fraud and a dangerous demagogue, who would disarm and bankrupt the republic.

Unlike Ed Muskie, who exploded in anger at another of William Leeb's low blows, Mc-Govern took it with amishle good humor and thanked Loeb for spelling his name correctly and printing a recognizable picture.

HARTFORD, Conn.—George He was not goaded by questions McGovern, acting very much about John Connally's opposition to his candidacy, but went back, to the old Populist answer that the "fat cats" and the "special" interests" were obviously going.

On his first swing of the campaign through New Hampshire and Connecticut, he seemed to be presenting himself. It was probably right he said that be was now 23 points behind the President in the election polls, but, then, he added, he bad only four points in the polls when he started his campaign in New Hampshire last winter, and, therefore, probably had a better. chance of winning the presidency than he had of winning the nomination last March.

Debate Sought

For the moment, he is clearly trying to provoke President Nixon into debates on the war and the economy and saying some very harsh things in a very quiet way. For example, he talks as if the administration was somehow planning the extension of the war in Vietnam and planning the unemployment, and he keeps asking why, if the President is so sure of his policies and his moralities. he does not debate them openly. and come clean on where he got the Republican campaign funds, and permit an objective

Greece and Turkey

The Herald Tribune editorial (July 18) expressing repugnance for Turkish hindrance with the Orthodox Patriarch's election was a refreshing change from the usual American post-war convenience of pairing off Gree with Turkey, strategically and otherwise. Despite some superficial but misleading similarities, Greece is as different from Turkey as Paris and Vienna are from Alaska

One is reminded of a passage in Henry Miller's "Colossus of Maroussi": "Then came the Smyrna disaster, with a harrowing, detailed recital of the horrors which the Turks perpetrated on the helpless Greeks and the merciful intervention of the American people which no Greek would ever forgst until his dying

Sen McGovern and others who speciously try now to threaten Greece with their half-baked political ideas should take note of all this.

U.S. Postal Aide Suspended in Probe Over Loan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP). The banking director of the U.S. Postal Service has been placed on leave without pay pending a probe of his action in helpa Washington builder obtain $500,000 loan from a New York bank that does more than a billion dollars worth of business annually with the postal service. The suspension of James T. Blair was announced by the Postal Service.

Mr. Blair has said he placed call to the First National City Bank of New York, which handles about $5 million of postal funds a day, to help obtain the loan for Dr. Cyrus Katzen. Mr. Blair said the call was made at the request of Douglas W. Inglish sr. a high-level aide on the Committee for the Reelection of the President. Mr. Inglish, who received $5,000 from Mr. Katzen, has been fired for his part in the deal. Mr. D. Jamison Cain. Acting Assistant Postmaster General for Communications, in announcing the suspension of Mr. Blair, said: After the facts have been determined, the Postal Service will take whatever action is warranted by the findings."

Mr. Katzen, one of the chief builders in the Washington area, said he had no idea that Mr. Blair was involved. He said the $5,000 fee-1 percent-was standard for such services.

ART MARKET.

A Drastic Reappraisal

By Souren Melikian

LONDON (IHT) ... British housewives are on a feverish hunt for discarded silver—and imitations—of the 19th century. They may be seen triumphantly emerging from the attics of country houses clutching hideous silver baskets, whose Victorian appearance speaks for itself or worse, or unbelievable silver-mounted tankerds weakly attempting to echo the glory of the 17th-century Nuremberg workmanshin.

I would not like to call the category objets d'art, but the succe of the latest sales of late 19th or even early 20th-century silver at-Sotheby's shows that it has been suddenly promoted to respectability. On Aug. 3, when one would expect all the dealers and collectors to be sightseeing in Greece or yachting on the Riviers, the most improbable wares—improbable a few years ago, that is—sold and sold

One lot described as "a four-piece tea and coffee set the octagonal bodies with an applied narrow, berried foliate hand below the escalloped rims, the teapot engraved with a presentation inscription in 1905," would hardly have attracted much notice before October 1971, when Sotheby's Belgravia inaugurated its new auction house at 19 Motcomb St. Last week it did and rose to £170. This is even more remarkable in view of the presentation inscription which collectors or people simply furnishing their houses don't care for.

Other lots in the same sale were even more expensive, comparatively speaking. The tea set weighed 73 ounces, 12 pennyweight. A round salver engraved in the center with a crest, weighing only 19 ounces, 7 pennyweight and dated 1900, made £45. It had little, if any, style. In order to appreciate the significance of such prices, they should be compared with those of the objets d'art belonging in categories traditionally regarded as decent without being particularly distinguished—such as late Georgian silver.

At the Aug. 3 sale, a George III teapot, with a crest, curved sport and angular ivery handle which was marked on base and cover by Emes and Barnard in 1811, fetched £52-only £7 less than the salver, with a weight slightly inferior at 18 onness, 10 pennyweight. Equally significant was the price of £105 paid for a boat-shaped dessert bowl. engraved on one side with a monogram, dated 1908 and weighing 29 ounces, 2 pennyweight, and that of £42 given for a Victorian toilet set, three glass bottles, four lars, three boxes with initialed silver mounts. Dated 1850, 1852, 1853, 1854, with 4 ounces, 5 pennyweight of "weighable silver," as the salesroom phrase goes, it sold for the same money as a nice George III christening mug of baluster shape on spreading foot, which had the inscription "C.S. Last week the new price range, which now almost g 19th end early 20th-century silver with late 18th and early tury places of ordinary quality and type, could easily be we Since and of season sales are subject to greater variation bids (IET, Aug. 5-6), it may be useful to compare figures with those of the July 20 suction including 19th an tury silver at Sotheby's Belgravia. Even ordinary in my view were the £180 paid for a copy by Mes of a 17th-century type two-handled cup, dated 1902. This silver of the period under consideration doesn't even n originality of style in order to sell. In fact the rose by down at £110 had very little indeed. Neither does it English. A mid-19th-century German tankard of silver m. 13 3/4 inches high, fetched £850. A couple of years a have been dismissed as an imitation and would never hav than £50 at any sale. It would certainly not have been a catalogus and, in all probability, would have been rej bigger auctioneers. Many more examples of this nature c to illustrate what I regard as a drastic reappraisal of consequence: the growing indifference to ertistic quali nality in the field of decorative objets d'art.

In addition to that they should be not later than 1930, time limit for an object to be called "antique." This is years later than the present definition of British custom that the latter, being no longer valid by the accepted auction goers and dealers, will not be maintained for mis

The suffices approach is to avoid any direct confrontation with their theme, the last seven days of Jesus's life. Their superstar has no message to deliver or ideas to express. They con-centrate on the reactions of other people to him, but these only goas far as stating questions is lesus man or God? without any attempt to explore them. The generic of the show seems to have been the observation that many not stars assume a self-made divinity. In turning this motion on its head, the authors present Jesus as a fading star who knows he has the ultimate kets from the gimmick to boost his popularity.

Paul Nicholas makes a pretty pre-Raphaelise figure and sings his songs well, but is unable to define Christ's character. His one positive action is to tell the halt and the blind that they must save themselves. Just as the star of "Othello" is lago, so here it is Judas who takes the honors in a fine and passionate performance by Stephen Tate. He is the one tasteful than figure who has any complexity. Economic Analysis

ce-Fed Distortion Nixon's Bold Departure a Year Old

By Hobart Rowen WASHINGTON Ang. 11 (WP).—The Republicans are cranking up the machinery of the executive establishment for a statistical bombardment to prove on its approaching first anniversary that President Nixon's new eco-nomic policy (wage-price controls, devaluation of the dollar) has been a huge success.

The Democrats, led by Sen. George McGovern, denounce these policies as a "calamity," emphasising continuing high unemployment as well as high prices.

Despite the hyperbole from both sides, it should not be too difficult to discern the significant facts and trends not easily obscured by political

The economy has responded to the stimulation of Mr. Nixon's program. Wage-price con-trols have had a moderating effect on inflation and in terms of jobs and economic growth, the economy is in better shape than it was a year

• Over the course of Mr. Nixon's presidency, the nation has suffered from a recession and then a rather slow recovery, with the result that there are some two million more persons un-employed than when he took office in January, 1980

With help from a Democratic-controlled Congress, Mr. Niron has let the budget get nut of control by cutting taxes in an irresponsible manner and spending money as if greenbacks were going out of style. The resultant record federal budget deficits can be met only with a tax increase, and Mr. McGovern, no less than Mr. Nixon, would have to confront this painful publish in 1973. Tax reform alone will not yield the necessary revenue.

• Despite his bold action last Aug. 15, Mr.

Nixon has had only temporary rewards in the international monetary area. The devaluation of the dollar, accompanied by a general rejiggering of exchange rates, temporarily stalled the collapse of the infernational monetary system. But John Connally's intransigence delayed meaningful long-term negotiations for modernization of the system and it is impossible to predict the outcome of talks that are now about to get under way.

There is plenty of evidence that the key economic problem of our times still is how to combine full employment with reasonable price stability-a goal that has eluded Democratic and Republican administrations alike over the years.

Inflation-Coemployment Trade-Off Mr. Nixon's advisers have come to the conclusion, citing work done by George Perry, an economist for the Brookings Institution, that full employment defined as 4 percent unemployment cannot be reached today without serious infla-tion. Anything helow 5 percent, they suggest, cannot be achieved without structural assists directed to young people, blacks, and women,

Mr. McGovern has not yet said how he would approach the "trade-off" between unemployment and inflation. Some of his economic sides are known to worry little about the price side, and McGovern position papers suggest that he does not look exclusively to traditional criteria of growth and stability to measure economic success. Presumably, this is one reason for his attractiveness to those voters stressing other values in our society. On the other hand, Mr. McGovern spoke feelingly in his Miami acceptance speech of prosperity and full employment as

He needs to fill in more of the details. Compared to the Nixon administration drift from the percent full employment target, this could be one of the most important differences of all between the economic approaches of the presiden-crease its influence. The government answer has been that only through closer cooperation with ENI, Italy's only other major producer of primary chemicals, can Montedison survive. According to the study, two solutions are possible. Both involve ENI taking over the Priolo and Brindlet refineries of Montedison. The former processes 15 million tons a year and the latter about 25 million. Two Solutions

ENI takeover of 50 percent of all present and future steamcracking and aromatic facilities of Montedison, which would be the sole buyer from these plants. ENI would be guaranteed a "rea-sonable" return on investment. Another solution calls for full ownership by ENI of all steamcracking and aromatic plants, and construction by ENI of all future such plants. Again, virmally the sole customer be Montedison.

The advantage to Montedison would be an increased flow of short-term capital to help with its other problems, in textiles and drugs, for example. However, it

Burmah Bid Cleared

The proposed merger between Burmsh Oil and Quinton Hazeli Ltd., an antomobile parts manufacturer, will not be referred to the Monopolies Commission by the Department of Trade and Industry, the government said today. It means the department has no objection to the £53-miklion Burmah takeover bld on anti-trust grounds. Hazeli direc-tors have endorsed the bid.

Fed Rumored Chemicals Lead Strong To Be Selling Wall Street Recovery More Francs

Aim Said to Be to Keep Exchange Market Calm

NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (Reuters). -There were indications that the Federal Reserve may have intervened in the foreign exchange market again today as a seller of Belgian francs.

Dealers here reported "s large seller" of francs in the market but were unable to confirm that it was the Federal Reserve.

The frame opened a touch stronger at 2.2818-25 cents com-pared with its close last night of 22016-24. But it was apparently trading erratically as calls to several dealers produced quotes ranging from 3.2510 up to 2.2622. The Fed reportedly moved into the market yesterday selling subsigntial amounts of francs, total-ing hundreds of millions of francs, according to informed sources. The move came after the Belgian currency opened near its ceiling.

The Fed was apparently acting again through one or more intermediaries today, making it difficult for dealers to say with certainty that it was in fact a support operation.

Limits Possible Depreciation

NEW YORK, Aug. 11 (NYT) .-The Fed's action in francs, the first of its type since the government last month sold deutsche marks and indicated its willingness to play a more active role in defending the dollar, aimed at bolding down the price of the foreign currency to limit any pos-sible depreciation of the dollar in relation to that currency.

The intervention had relatively little effect on the foreign-exchange market, but as one foreignexchange trader put it, the bank seems to be trying to remind the vantages and disadvantages to market of its willingness to intervene. This could be important, this trader said, in calming market fears that could develop be-fore the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund next

U.S. Says Japan 'Dumped' Wool

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (Reuters).-The Treasury Department announced today it has determined that imported Japanese wool and polyester/wool worsted fabrics are being sold here at less than their domestic value.

The Tariff Commission must now make a determination as to whether U.S. industry is being injured by the imports, which totaled about $60 million between January 1979 and March 1972. FISCAL YEAR 1971

Extracts from the report of the board of management

The annual general meeting, chaired by Dr. HANNS DEUSS held in Frankfurt approved the accounts for the fiscal year 1971.

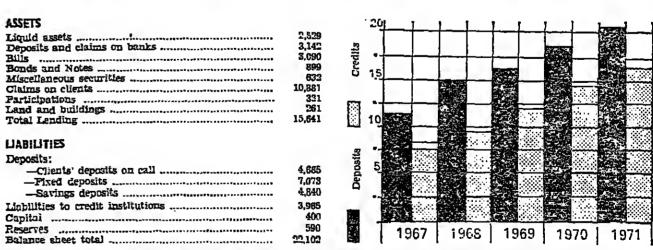

Although the year was marked by uncertainty, due to the monetary crisis, the bank succeeded in improving its position. The balance sheet total showed an increase of 12.5% over 1970, exceeding DM 22 billion, thus dcubling over the past five years. The graup's consolidated balance sheet amounted to nearly DM 30 billian.

The bank's valume of businesss, including rediscounted bills, reached DM 22.8 billion, an increase of 16% over 1970. Earnings for the fiscal year came to DM 76.6 million against DM 69.5 million in the previous year. A dividend of DM 8.50 per DM 50 share was paid out (equal to that of the previous year). DM 15 million were allocated to reserves. Commerzbank continued to strengthen its cooperatian with Banca di Rama and Crédit Lyannais and at the beginning of 1972, the group was backed by nearly DM 100 billion in assets.

The bank's growing activities in the international business and financial markets were further camplemented by the opening of a branch office in New

NEILL! NEILL! ORANGE PEEL! An Autobiography

By A.S. Neill. 538 pps. Illustrated. Hart. $10 Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

confess that lately I had grown almost numb to books arguing the virtues of experimental education, Perhaps it was because, despite the tidal wave of them that has swept over us during the last decade, they do not seem to have done much to change the system; perhaps it was because some of their claims and demands had grown excessive; or perhaps it was simply because I had read too many of them to be responsive any longer: whatever the reasons, I had the cynic's nausea upon me and I was sync s naises upon me and I was sure I could not stomach another word about the blossoming of the inner child or another illustra-tion of the beauty of trust and freedom in the classroom. And then here came A.S. Neill's thick autobiography off the slagheap of the summer publishing schedule—here came this whimsically titled grab bag of reflections by the founder (way back in 1924) of the now famous experimental Summerbill School in England-and my spirits were revived.

It is not that "Neill! Neill! Orange - Peel!" is particularly potent as an autobiography. "I. really did not want to write this. Others bullied me into it." Neill confesses near the end. And so it reads to a large extent. Looking back over this near-try of years yours life he had begin ly 90-year-young life, he begins strongly enough with vivid, en-dearing sketches of his boyhood in rural Scotland as a clumsy, unpromising child who loved his mother too much and satisfied his father's smbitions too little. But the pictures fade too rapidly into sketchy impressions and mere dots of reminiscence.

We never do learn precisely how this ugly duckling of a dull child achieved grace as a self-confident rebel against church, state, and the established educational system. We never quite grasp what led him to start the International School in Dresden that was to become Summerbili when it was moved to Lyme Regis, England, in 1924. Faded and cracked are the portraits of such key influen-tial figures in Neill's life as Homer Lane, the first of Neill's many psychoanalysts and the founder of The Little Common-wealth (which foreran Summerhill as a private experimental school) or Wilhelm Reich, the orgone theorist whom Neill still firmly believes will be declared a great genius a few generations hence. What exactly led Neill to be psychoanalyzed in those earliest days of its practice, we wonder. How did the socially unaware Tory who once threw a tomato at Liberal Winston Churchill become the outspoken socialist of his mature years? Perhaps we can extrapolate the answers to such questions, but the drama is missing from these pages.

Altogether, this is a recording that seems to skip the revealing passages, and to wind down at the end to the fragmentary musings of an old man (in Part II, "Thoughts on Summerhill," and Part III, "Thoughts at the End of Life") It is almost sad to come across in the penultimate section of the volume the passages from the first 21 books, a diary of eq ing experiences called nie's Log, with their vigor of expression, a edged precision of illust their baunting univers Neill's books, the me of which is of course hill: A Radical Ar Child Resaring," is advi-this section first of all to fall into the ma repetitious "Letters to (of London) in the f

The Orioles Ran Into Trouble Quicker Than They Could Spell Frank Robinson

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (WF) The place where Frank Robinson used to dwell, the No. 3 spot in Baltimore's batting order, has been quiet this season. No more loud home runs, few runs batted in.

It has been a mouth since the Orioles got a home run from a No. 3 hitter, the slot supposedly reserved in all line-ups for the best hitter. Those Orlole 'best hitters"-and there have been eight of them this year—have hit in the 240 range, consistently a few points below Robinson. In Los Angeles, Robinson has struggled with injuries and National League pitching, but he still has outshown his replacements.

Robinson has 18 home runs.

Robinson has 13 home runs.
45 RBI on 268 at-bets. The Orioles' No. 3 hitters have three home runs and 23 RBI in 271 at-bets.
Shamp-ridden Boog Powell has also batted, third 76 times, hut to include his No. 3 figures, four homers and 13 RBI, is begging the question. When Powell bats third, Robinson's loss is felt in Powell's traditional clean-up spot.

Double Loss
"Trading Robinson was like losing two players," seys Johnny Sain, White Sox pitching coach. "A good hitter who might have batted fifth or sixth now has to bat over his head in the three spot. That weakens the three spot and the bottom of the order too. Pitchers can work around Boog Powell more now because there is usually only one real hitter (Brooks Rohinson) hehind Robinson, whom he called "the toughest clutch out in the league. Now the first and secand hitters are easier." he says. "You don't have to worry as much about walking them. With Frank coming np, it meant two

"Robinson's hits won games," Roland adds. "He could get himself up on another level for certain situations." Victors Circle'

Robinson himself admits that one man can make an abnormal amount of difference in a team. 'It can be a vicious circie. One thing leads to another. When the guy in front of you is going bad, you try to do more more than you're capable of doing," he says.

Those in particular that manager Earl Weaver's musical chairs line-ups seem to confuse are Bobby Grich, Terry Crowley and Pani Blair, who have batted third in a majority of Oriole games.

Grich, the current favorite, has no homers and seven RBI m 21 games. Blair, the choice in June, bit .250, but the team lost nine of 16 games in his term in Robinson's office. Crowley drove in three runs in 15 games. In one stretch Weaver changed his third batter 12 days in a row. Even Johnny Oates and Mark Belanger took futile turns.

Team to Beat' New York Yankee manager Houk still calls the Orioles "the team to beat," and Frank Robinson says: "I find myself rooting for them. I sympathize. They're lucky to be as close as they are (in second place, one game behind Detroit) the way they're play-Nevertheless, the feeling of Oriole mortality spreads. One Yankee says: Robinson was the man I least wanted to see in the late innings."

"I guess you do feel some gratification when your old team has trouble without you," Robinson said in a telephone interview.

"The people know I did a good job, so I don't have to root against the Orioles. I wouldn't say anything against them, but I'll admit, you like to feel you were important...

Rohinson talks diplomatically about his good wishes for his old teammates, but when an unfortunate phrase is used-"the players who have replaced you" -Robinson hrings the conversation to a helt.

"Trying to replace me."

Weaver Leads Westchester Golf by 1 With 64

By Lincoln A. Werden

HARRISON, N.Y., Aug. 11 (NYT).—DeWitt Weaver jr., with a new putter and a new attitude, led the opening round of the $250,000 Westchester Golf Classic yesterday with a 64.

The 8-under-par score over the Westcherter Country Club course was the best on the tour for the 32-year-old professional, whose first circuit triumph came in the 1971 National Match Flay championship at Pinehurst, N.C.

Trailing Weaver by one stroke were Jack Nicklaus and rookie Steve Melnyk at 65.

Arnold Palmer, who captured the tournament's $50,000 first prize a year ago, finished with a 73. He three-putted twice and missed a par putt at the 13th hole of the 6,700-yard course.

5 Straight Birdies

Dwight Nevil, formerly a member of the Dallas fire department, and one-time Air Force radio CDerator, tied for fourth at 66 after five consecutive birdies starting at the fifth. Also at 66 was Labron Harris fr., National Amateur ex-

Gary Player, the PGA title-holder, began his quest for honors here with a 72, and 22-year-old Jim Simons, who has been play-ing pro golf "in the minor league" in Florida, made his hig league pro debut with a 69.

Jack Nicklaus

An Easy 65 for Nicklaus

HARRISON, N.Y., Aug. 11 (NYT).-The 12th hole on the West Course at the Westchester Country Club measures 500 yards if you stretch the tape across the old quarry in front of the green, or approximately nine miles if you're careless. Jack Nicklaus hit a No. 3 wood off the tee yesterdey and decided he could get home with a four-iron. The hall stopped just short of the green, so with his sand wedge he chipped it into the cup for an eagle 3. He had begun on the 10th tee, so the 12th was the third hole for him. On the next 15 he shot five birdies and didn't yield a stroke to par, bringing in a score of 65. Until DeWitt Weaver ir, finished with a 64 at the end of a breezy, sunny day, Nicklaus and young Steve Meinyk shared the lead for the opening round of the $250,000 Westchester Classic.

It is downright immoral to say that a 65 can he easy, but Nickhus made it look that way. His drives were true, his irons generally accurate, and on the few occasions when he missed a green he was able to thip up stiff. He never had to sink a putt of more

"On the four par-5 holes," be said, "I was five under—an eagle and three birdies." When he is on his game, that's what he does to the long holes. When he is on his game, he is the best goifer in the world. This has been true for a long time, but until this year there were many who resented the truth and rejected it.

Until this year he was an upstart and an interloper, the crasher who had dared to expose Arnold Palmer as merely human. Ten years ago, in his first season as a professional, he beat Palmer in a playoff for the United States Open championship and won the undying enmity of the rabble they called Arnie's Army. Undying, that is, until be set out this year on a hunt for the four top titles in professional golf—the Masters, the U.S. Open, the British Open and the Professional Golfers Association. He won the Masters, he won the U.S. Open, and even those who had hated his guts were saddened when he missed hy a stroke in the British Open.

"You know," a man told him yesterday, 'you've been Gene Tun-ney. You whipped Jack Dempsey." Then, seeing Nicklaus's puzzled frown, the man explained: "You beat Arnie, so the moh hated you." The expression cleared. "It's been a very interesting experience, these last 10 years," he said. "And especially interesting this year, hy MUNICH. Aug. 11.—Rhodesia's Olympic contingent of 44 achieues and 12 officials arrived here today and received a warm welcome from the West German organizers. The squad wore green hinzers which hore the Rhodesian emblem. There was no trace of the Union Jack.

Slerra Leone and Zamhia announced today they would not compete here. In Lusaka, Zamhian Minister of Information Sikota Wina said should Rhodesia compete, Zambia would pull out In Freetown, President Slaka Stevens's office said Sierra Leone's team would remain at

In another move, at Kampala Uganca, President Idi Amin said as his team departed that he would recall it if the Rhodesians compete,

The controversy over Rhodesia's entry seemed to have been resolved when the Internetional Olympic Committee, ylelding to threats of a boycott from soma African end Asian nations, entered the nation under its old name of Southern Rhodesia and said it would participate under the British flag and, in event of a Rhodesian victory, under the British nationel anthem.

Olympic organizers said that they have not received any official netification of Tanzania's

Tanzania said it would forgo competition.

Poles Remain Banned

LONDON, Aug. 11 (Reoters). -The International Amateur Athletic Federation will stand firm on its decision that e new type of fiberglass pole manufactured in the United States would not be used at the Olympics.

John Holt, executive director of the IAAF, replied to an annonncement by a U.S. com-pany. Durafiber, yesterday that it would take legal action if the poles were not allowed at Munich.

The new pole was used by Bob Seagren when he set a world record of 5.63 meters (18 feet 5-3/4 inches) in the U.S. Olympic Trials at Eugene, Ore., last month.

Chuvalo Halts Burns

NELSON, British Columbia, Aug. 11 (AP).—George Chuvalq retained his Canadian heavyweight hoxing title last night, stopping Tommy Burns at 2:36 of the first round of a scheduled 12-rounder. The 34-year-old champion floored the unranked Burns three times before referee

Dave Brown halted the bout.

After losing to Lee Trevino in the final round at Muirfield. Scotland Nicklaus played twilight tennis with an Irish friend, Jim Fitzgibbon. A former Davis Cup player, Fitzgihbon beat him.

"You may be the only inter-nationalist to lose at two different gemes on the same day,"

Nicklaus laughed. "I didn't want to sit in the hotel and have everybody come up and tell me they were sorry I lost and have to say thanks, I was sorry, too. So I got Jim and we played an hour and a half and I released my frustrations."

Bears' Field Goal Nips NFL Oilers

HOUSTON, Aug. 11 (AP).— The Chicago Bears converted a free kick into a seven-yard field goal by Mac Percival with three seconds to play last night to gain a come-from-behind 20-17 exhibition National Football League victory over the Houston Oilers in the Astrodome.

Just two minutes earlier, rookie Rogers Lawson had scored on a run from the 9-yerd line to climax an 80-yard drive and get Chicago even, 17-17. Quarterback Lynn Dickey, a sophomore pro, had led Houston to a 14-3 halftime lead. On first plays after Houston recoveries of two Bear fumbles, Dickey passed 45 yards to Ken Burrough, and 47 yards to Charlie Joyner, for touchdowns,

Recalling a Group Of Musicians Who Were Called the 6

PARIS (IHT).—The literary revolution in Paris in the 1920s has been amply explained, and antiquaires are able to sell Art Deco furniture at prices usually reserved for pieces of value and beauty. But the one totally French artistic movement of the time, the music composed by the group known as Les Six, has nearly been forgot-

The group has been remembered recently and gracefully by an Englishman, James Barding, in "The Ox on the Roof" (published in London by MacDonald), which he subtitles "Scenes From Musical Life in Paris in the Twenties." The book has a stout bibliography, but reveals its entirely suitable intention to entertain with au epigraph from Francis Picabia: "When will people get out of the habit of explaining Reasons for recent neglect of Les Six may include the deliberately flash-in-the-pan quality of much of their music (one composer, for example, wrote a piece inspired by movie uewareels) and by the fact that it was intimately connected with the most ephemeral of arts, ballet. Another reason may be that Les Six (so hamed, 8 journalist astutely pointed out, se there were six of them) had little in common besides their youth: The tie that bound them was Jean Cocteau.

Cocteau's instructions to Les Six included: Seek poetry in the commonplace, he Prench (in fact, Milhaud, Durey and Poulenc were disloyally intrigued by Schoenberg and Honegger liked the German romantics), be simple ("the café-concert is often pure," Cocteau decreed, "the theater is often corrupt"), and above all he lighthearted. This last rule must have been the hardest: Milhaud once said that he had had to disguise his music with Honegger and Poulenc, perhaps the most highly regarded members of the group for their post-Six compositions, are dead. The still-controversial Milhaud has long been at Mills College in California. Louis Durey, in Saint-Tropez, devotes himself to Com-munism and has set to music poems by Mao Tse-tung and Ho Chi Minh. Germaine Tailleferre, the only woman member of the Six, has said, "My own music no longer interests me, and concrete and 12tone music, which attract me, call for such hard labor that I haven't the strength to cope with them." Georges Auric has attended tout Paris gatherings faithfully administered the Paris Opera rather unsuccessfully, and has composed the scores for many films, including "Moulin Rouge."

In "The Ox on the Roof" James Harding

urbanely describes Les Six as "a move-

Tailleferre, Auric, Durey; seated, Honnegger, ment that never was" and states that their names were linked in a joint production only once, in 1920, with the Album des Six: six piano pieces in alphabetical order by

Mr. Harding describes their collaborations and collisions. Most interesting, he devotes much space to the atmosphere they worked in and to "Le Bœuf sur le Toit," the nightclub from which his book gets its title. The nightclub took its name from Milhaud's ballet. Where Milhaud got the title for his score is a subject of scholarly debate, but why object to his own explana-song (Milband had spent some time in Brazil with writer-diplomat Paul Claudel)? MARY BLUME

tion that it was from a Brazilian popular

Musical life in Paris in the twenties begins for Mr. Harding on May 18, 1917, with the ballet "Parade" composed, in Harding's words, by an obscure alcoholic called Eric Satie was a sort of uncle figure to Les Six a relationship fixed by Cocteau who admired the composer's eccentricity and playfulness (Satie would advise planists to play "without prido" and "in a gleaming manner" and at one point instructed players of "Parade" to "tremble like a leaf").

"Parade" was produced by Diaghllev from a Coeteau idea, with choreography by Massine and sets and costumes by Picasso. In addition to Satie's score there was Stravinsky's specially commissioned orchestration of the "Song of the Volga Bostman." The work was set in a fairground and, as Georges Auric remarked, "All the sorrow of the traveling circus is there—the nostalgia of the barrel organ which will never play Bach fugues."

Predictably, "Parade"; caused a scandal in wartime Paris. Opening night there were howls of protest so loud that conductor Ernest Ansermet could not hear his players, and spectators shouted out random in-"Dagoes!" · "Boches!" smokers!"

Later, Apollinaire wrote about "Parade." using the curious word "surrealism" and pointing out that "Parade" perfected "for the first time that alliance of painting and the dance, of the plastic and the mimic arts, which symbolizes the advent of an art complete in itself. We hope the public will look on 'Parade' as a work that hides poetry beneath its crude Punch and Judy wrapping."

As Apollipairs had predicted, the work of Les Six was intimately bound to the other arts of the '20s, so Mr. Harding's book brings back many familiar figures: poet, ether addict and Man of God Max Jacob, boy-about-town Raymond Radiguet (whose death earned Cocteau the sobriquet of Le Venf Sur le Tott and whose funeral was designed by Chanell, Boni de Castellane the unspeakable Maurice Sachs, the batty President of the Republic Paul Deschanel, Kiki of Montparnasse, and finally Chanel herself and a dramatic version the historic moment when she cut her

As Chanel was running her bath before going to the opera, Mr. Harding writes, "The geyser exploded and covered her with debris. When she had wiped off the dirt she found that half her hair was missing. There was no time to lose. Calmly, she snipped off the ragged ends and washed what remained. Her entry at the Opera was sensational. Next day there was hardly s chignon to be seen in Paris. The mode for short hair had begun."

Of such stuff history is made,

PEOPLE:

Former Beatle Paul McCariney, his wind I hada, and Danny Sel-well, a drummer in Mr. Mc-Cartney's new rock band, Wings, more fined about $1,765 Friday at (Goteborg: Sweden, for possession of 168 grams of hashish "Police said that the three had admitted; that a friend in England malled them the bashish fer their use during a concert tour of Scondingria. They were relessed and continued on to Lund, Sweden, for a concert. "Since it, was obvious the cannable was intended for themselves and not for sale in Sweden they were freed after being fined," a narcotics detective said.

McCartney said that the police had found "a little bit" of hashish in their dressing room and more at their hotel. He added that the police "seemed to be very afraid of grass here in Sweden and described the incident as "a big bother about almost nothing." . His wife, a singer, called the affair good public relations. The concert hall was only half-filled, and Swedish critics described the performance as mediocre. Policemen and customs officials were waiting in the wings of the ball following the group's last number. McCarriey and his troupe of about 20 persons were questioned behind stage as the audience of about 3,000 stomped and clapped for an encore.

Then he, his wife and Seiwell were taken to police headquarters for further questioning in the presence of the British Consulate's legal adviser, Per-Olof Lewerth.

He said that the three had admitted their guilt but that ac-cording to Swedish law a trial could not be held at that hour, and charges were not lodged. They were fined nonetheless. The fines will probably be sustained by a court later, he added, but the defendants will not be required to appear.

Newspaper seller Gravino Agostinoni, of Monte Silvano, Italy, has invented what he claims is the world's first completely automatic spagnetti ma-chine. Agostinoni, who has already built a prototype, pours flour and water in one end and 20 minutes later the machine produces 40 portions of cooked spaghetti. With containers for sauce and parmesan cheese and a conveyor belt to carry the plates, the machine produces a ready-to-eat helping of spagnetti. Machines already exist for pre-
